THE HUNT CO.

WHOLE EAST SIDE HAS CIVIC PRIDE

Porch of Eblright Home Is Genuine Beauty Spot; Shows What Can Be Done.

Residents of the east side are making a bid for civic beauty. The great residence district which has sprung up within the past two years has aroused itself to a point of enthusiasm which promises to make it the pride of Tulsa.

Hundreds of small bungalows are nestled among well-trimmed trees, surrounded by perfect patches of lawn and adorned by brightly blooming flowers.

Only one four through this portion of the city will convince a spectator of the effect of caring for lawns and premises, as the plain little bungalows are set forth in a pleasing manner by their well-kept landscapes.

One of the most striking of these cultured spots is the home of Mrs. T. R. Eblright, 1534 South Second street. Although the Eblright lawn is in perfect shape and the trees show care, it is towards neither of these that public attention is directed.

For Mrs. Eblright is credited with having the most picturesque front porch in the city.

First catching the eye are two vines, one at either end of the porch. The vines are cypress vines and their value lies in the fact that they may be trained in any way. Mrs. Eblright has formed the whole into a perfect spider's web, an effect which catches the eye of every pedestrian and many automobilists.

On the front of the porch Mrs. Eblright has outlined the porch with balsam apple vines with heavy foliage. Hanging in the middle of this are three baskets of flowers. Below on the ground is a bed of carnations. On the steps are flower boxes. The floor of the porch is adorned with ferns in pots.

"I have done it all since June 1," says Mrs. Eblright, "and in spite of the hot winds and drought."
